A Romance of the War. date, gives the following history of a romance preceding a marriage recently solemnized at the Grand Hotel in that field. For bravery he was promoted to the rank of Sergeant, and shortly thereafter, whilst near Harrer's Ferry he was sent on a secret mission by the General in command of the division to which his regiment belonged .-While proceeding in the direction of Leesburg he happened to pass a farm house, and heard a woman's cries as if in distress. He rushed forward and saw a young woman in the hands of two Confederate soldiers, who had bound her and were about to place a gag in her mouth. One of the soldiers he shot, the other fled, and the girl was released. Her name was Ellen Mayfield, the daughter of a wealthy land owner in Maryland, and then on a visit to some relatives, who were absent when the attempt to outrage her was perpetrated. Young Marshall was favorably impressed by the young lady and she with him, but the urgency of his expedition was inexorable, and he had to depart almost immediately. At Antietam-a Lieutenant-he was wounded, and was carried to a barn and left there. He was fast sinking, when several ladies approached, and his eyes brightened when among them he saw Miss Mayfield. The wounded officer was conveyed to the house of her father, who had removed to Adams county, Pennsylvania, and there he was tenderly nursed until able to rejoin his regiment. The two parted as lovers who had not declared their passion, but in the moon," is unknown. This name who understood each other perfectly, and had resolved to correspond. Once more the Lieutenant was wounded—

ing, mischievous postmaster's son. CAUSE OF PUNY CHILDREN .- A writer in the Home Journal (New York) asks two pertinent questions: Why is a woman so weak?" and "Why so easily overborne in the struggle for bread?" Appleton's Journal answers by saying that woman is weak because persistently over-worked. She ought to be generally employed, but never exhausted. It is often remarked that our grandmothers and greatgrandmothers far surpased the present eneration of women in constant, heavy manual labor. But they really overworked themselves, and that is one reason the present generation is so weak. Women, like men need exercise, but not exhaustive labor. From the latter they ought to be exempt. Men ought to do the heavy work. The race would then improve, physically and intellectually. Farmers take more care of their mares than they do of their wives. When men are compelled for a short time to do women's work, how they do complain of its exhausting and depressing character! In childhood, let the girl have the physical activity that boys have. When womanhood begins, let the necessities of the sex subordinate every other consideration. There are then regular periods when rest for the body is necessary; and during maternity she must rest or else ruin the constitutions of her offspring. Hence, any labor which is steadily exacting is wrong for women. Standing behind a counter all day is worse than the average of house-work.

Let the women demand rest.

A CALAFORNIA paper reprints the story of the duel thirty years ago, be-tween John Hampden Pleasants, editor of the Richmond Whig, and Thomas Ritchie, Jr., editor of the Richmond Enquirer. The challenge from Pleasant to Ritchie was one of the most extraordinary ever sent: "I will be on the Manchester side of the James river, near the factory, between the river and canal, to-morrow at 5 o'clock, armed with rifle, pistol and sword. We will advance and fire on each other until one or both falls." This was the substance of Mr. Pleasants's challers. lenge. Mr. Ritchie objected to it for various reasons, among which were: Because it gives the challenging party the choice of time, and weapons, a right invariably accorded by the code to the challenged; because its terms are savage, sanguinary and revolting to the tastes of civilized society. Notwithstanding these objections, I will be at the place, at the hour, armed in the manuer prescribed, and will defend myself from any attack made on me. When the duel came off, Pleasant's was mortally wounded, but returned Ritchie's fire, and continued to advance on him, and when within striking distance, drew his sword, giving Ritchie a severe cut on the lip, which was the only wound the latter received. Pleasant's lingered only a few days, and Ritchie ended his life by remorseful dissipation.

The English edition of Mr. Spureon's sermon on the text, "These are they who separate themselves," Jude 19, contains some outspoken words against close communion, from which we quote:

"There is not a Christian beneath the scope of God's heaven from whom I am separated. At the Lord's table I always invite all Christians to come and sit down and commune with us. If any man were to tell that I am separated from the Episcopalian, the Pres-byterian, or the Methodist, I would tell him he did not know me, for I love them with a pure heart fervently, and I am not separated from them. * "The pulse of Christ is communion; and woe to the Church that seeks to cure the ills of Christ's Church by stopping its pulse. I think it a sin to refuse to commune with any one who is a member of the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ. I should think myself grossly in fault, if at the foot of myself grossly in fault, if at the foot of these stairs I should meet a truly converted child of God, who called himself a Primitive Methodist, a Wesleyan, or a Churchman, or an Independent, and I should say, 'No, sir; you do not agree with me on certain day in February and 4th Monday in August.

ARLINGTON, Houston county, 4th Monday in February and 4th Monday in August. you do not agree with me on certain points; I believe you are a child of God, but I will have nothing to do with you.' I should then think the textwould bear very hard on me, 'These are they who cover to the weekly sen. are they who separate themselves, sen-

This is good doctrine, and coming from the greatest Baptist preacher of the age, will be hailed with delight by In 1862, George Marshall, a young lawyer, in New Jersey, flung aside his law books and took up arms on the Northern side, ambitious to serve his country and to win fame on the battle-

> A SEA-FARING MAN, who was recently married, gives the following description of the bride and her apparal, which we think will put some of the "society" papers to the blush: My wife is just as handsome a craft as ever left the millinery dry-docks, is clipper built, and with a figure head not very often seen on small craft. Her length of keel is five feet eight inches, over all five feet eleven inches, displaces twenty-seven cubic feet of air; of light draught, which adds to her speed in a ball-room; full in the waist, spars trim. At the time we were spliced she was newly rigged, fore and aft, with standing rigging of lace and flowers, mainsail part silk, with forestaysail of Valenciennes. Her frame was of the best steel, covered with silk, with whalebone stancheons. This rigging is intended for fair weather crusing. She has also a set of storm sails for rough weather, and is rigging out a small set of canvass for light squalls, which are liable to occur in this latitude sooner or later. I am told, in running down the street before the wind, she answers the helm beautifully, and can turn around in her own length if a handsomer craft passes her.
